B- Reading Comprehension

RC

Read the following passage, then answer the questions

How can you best improve your English depends particularly on whether or not you live in an English speaking community. If you hear English spoken every day and mix freely with English speaking people, that is an advantage. On the other hand, it is often confusing to have the whole language poured over you at once. Ideally, a step-by-step course should accompany or lead up to this experience. It will also help a great deal if you can easily get the sort of English books in which you are interested.

To read a lot is essential. Read as many books in English as you can, not as study but for pleasure. Do not choose the most difficult books you find with the idea of listing and learning as many new words as possible. Choose what is likely to interest you and be sure in advance that it is not too hard. You should not have to be constantly looking up new words in the dictionary, for that deadens interest and checks real learning. Look up a word here and there but as a general policy try to guess what words mean from the context. You should enjoy the feeling which reading gives of having some command of the language. As you read, you will become more and more familiar with words and sentence patterns you already know; understanding them better and better as you meet them in more and more contexts, some of which may differ only slightly from others.

Read the following passage, then answer the questions

An elderly carpenter was ready to retire. He told his employer of his plans to leave the house building business and live a more leisurely life with his family. He would miss the pay cheque, but he needed to retire. The employer was sorry to see his good worker go and asked if he could build just one more house as a personal favour. The carpenter said 'yes', but in time it was easy to see that his heart was not in his work. He resorted to bad workmanship and used inferior material. It was an unfortunate way to end his career.

When the carpenter finished his work, his employer handed over the key of the house to the carpenter — "This is your house, my gift to you." What a shock! What a shame! If he had only known he was building his own house, he would have done it all so differently! Now he had to live in a poorly built house. So it is with us. We build our lives, a day at a time, often putting less than our best into the building. Then, with a shock, we realize we have to live in the house we have built. If we could do it over, we would do it much differently. But, you cannot go back. You are the carpenter, and every day you hammer a nail, place a board, or erect a wall. Someone once said, your attitude, and the choices you make today, help build the "house" you will live in tomorrow. Therefore, build wisely!

Read the following passage, then answer the questions

A team of researchers has come up with an electricity wireless system. This is a breakthrough in what will hopefully be a wireless future. They managed to light a 60-watt light bulb using magnetic fields. In the test, the power source was just two metres away from the light, but the team hopes they will soon be able to send electricity longer distances through the air. They have dubbed their new invention "WiTricity". Although wi-fi has been around for some years now, it has been limited to the transmission of information, especially between computers and modems, printers and scanners. This is the first time electrical appliances have been powered wirelessly.

This new development means that our houses may be free from tangled wires. Gone will be the days of having to unplug the vacuum to go from room to room and of having countless plugs hidden behind the TV and stereo. The new source of delivering power to gadgets remotely may also reduce the number of fires caused by poor wiring and overloaded sockets. It turns out the concept is not so new. A century ago, inventor Nikola Tesla struck upon the idea of building a huge tower in New York that would wirelessly beam power to the city. Unfortunately, his idea never came to fruition, until today, that is. Safety experts will be checking closely to ensure the power source causes us no harm.

Choose the correct answer from a, b, c, or d:

29. The most suitable title for the passage could be .....

- (a) electrical appliances (b) Wireless electricity
(c) The bad effects of WiTricity. (d) Wired gadgets

- (a) We will have tangled wires. (b) It will light a 60-watt light bulb.
(c) It will ensure safety at home. (d) There won't be electricity in the future

B- Reading Comprehension

RC

Read the following passage, then answer the questions

The next time you take printouts unnecessarily or you throw a paper into the bin, think for a minute as to how many trees have been felled to manufacture something you use so often every day.

Can you take out some time from your everyday routine and devote it to starting a simple recycling programme at your school or your neighbourhood? Not only would you save our planet, but you would also reduce generation and dumping of waste into the environment.

Using recycled paper conserves natural resources. As our worldwide population grows, the strain on these resources becomes even greater. You can reduce the number of trees cut down for manufacturing paper. In addition to saving landfill space, there is a reduction in air pollution.

A paper-recycling programme gives a positive image. Parents can teach their children the importance of recycling. Schools can also train students to make paper products like: cards, files, folders, invitation cards and certificates. The real success of such programmes is visible in the simple acts like students exchanging books. This is amazing that only a single sheet is saved by each child, 40,000 trees could be saved per year by students only.

If we keep our minds focused on the desire to be friendly to our earth and its resources, recycling will become important. After a while, we will be in the habit of recycling the paper.

B- Reading Comprehension

RC

Read the following passage, then answer the questions

Honeybees make buzzing sounds when they fly, but that is not the way how they communicate. Instead, they do some amazing things to tell other bees things they need to know.

Dancing is the instrumental way of communication between bees especially when needing to tell where to find flowers. When a bee locates those flowers, it returns to the hive and does a special "dance." For a bee, a dance means moving in a certain way as it crawls around. There are "round dances" that bees do when the flowers are close to the hive. There are also "waggle dances," which the bees do when the flowers are farther away.

Bee dances are not the only way a bee communicates. Bees also produce chemicals called pheromones. If an animal like a bear approaches the beehive, the honeybees' bodies start to make these special chemicals. Other bees sense these pheromones and know that an animal is threatening the hive. They all start to fly out to try to sting the animal and scare it away.

You can see there are many ways to communicate that are different from what people do. Imagine doing a dance to tell someone something! The next time you see a honeybee on a flower, think about the bee that did its special dance to tell other bees where to go.

All around the world, buildings are going green! What does it mean to go green or to make a green building? A green building is designed in a way that is kinder to the environment. This building uses energy, water, and other resources in ways that cause no pollution.

In the first step of making a green building, design, the architect must think about the three most important features. These are the use of energy, water, and materials. The architect plans how to use materials, energy, and space in a way that will be good for the environment.

There are many ways to save energy. Architects can design buildings to use natural light. Buildings can also be made with solar or wind power to get energy from the sun or wind. To save water, green buildings can have areas on the roofs to collect rainwater. Bathrooms and kitchens can have sinks and toilets that conserve water. As for the materials used to build the building, it is important to use materials that do not have chemicals that are harmful to the air or water. Recycled materials can also be used for building.

Read the following passage, then answer the questions

Do you wish you could be in perfect health your entire life? Recent scientific research has shown that if people practised just three simple behaviors, they could not only prolong their lives but make them healthier as well. If you are willing to commit to leading a longer and healthier life, first, eat the right foods in the right amounts. Three-fourths of your plate should be filled with fruits, vegetables, and whole grains. If you cannot give up eating meat, choose lean meat. Eat poultry, fish, beans, and foods that are low in saturated fats, cholesterol, salt, and sugar. People who wish they could more easily control the amount they eat may find that using a smaller plate will help. Next, exercise at least 30 minutes a day at least three days a week. If you exercise five or more days a week or at least 75 minutes each time, the results will be even better for you. Exercise helps increase muscle, strengthen bones, and improve balance.

Third, make sure to get sufficient sleep. If you are over the age of 18, you probably need seven to nine hours of sleep each night. If you cannot get that much sleep, take a short nap of 20–30 minutes per day. These behaviors are the keys to living a longer and healthier life. Read the following passage, then answer the questions

For centuries, people grew their own food and ate it themselves, keeping some for the long winter. However, agriculture has changed a great deal in the last 100 years. Most people no longer grow their own food. They buy it in supermarkets and grocery stores. Companies process and package most of this food before it gets to the supermarket.

Would you like to know where your food comes from? You can check yourself. Most food labels give this information. Labels allow us to get to know the contents and ingredients of the products we are buying.

"Food miles" is the distance that food travels to get to us. For example, a person who lives in Japan may buy Kiwifruit that comes from New Zealand. This kiwifruit has to travel 5,800 miles (9,300 kilometers) to get to this person. Airplanes, ships, trains, and trucks may bring this food. This transportation uses a lot of fuel that can cause pollution. When food travels, some of it needs to stay cool, which takes more energy and fuel. Also, companies put chemicals on food to help it last longer while it travels. These chemicals may not be good for our health.

It's convenient to buy food from all around the world. However, by choosing local food, you can save energy, improve your health, and help local businesses. As people say, "Eat locally, think globally!"

Read the following passage, then answer the questions.

For centuries mankind has suffered from headaches. In this time doctors and scientists have tried to discover the cause of headaches and a cure for them. Yet even today medicine does not have many answers. It is true that there are more drugs and medicines that can relieve the pains, but this is not enough. We cannot solve the problem of headaches until we know the cause—or causes, for there is not just one reason for pains in the head. Aspirin is widely used but there are problems in taking this drug: it is not the harmless white tablet that some people think.

There are many kinds of headache. The most common is migraine. This affects only one side of the head and, for some unknown reason, attacks mostly women. It appears to run in families.

Men can be attacked by migraine, of course, but in men the most common form of headache is the cluster pain. This may attack a person for a few hours or a few days, but then it goes away and may not return for many months, or even years.

What is the cause of headaches? Most medical experts agree that it is caused by blood vessels in the brain becoming too full of blood. Then a substance called neurokinin appears; this is a chemical that produces pain. Therefore, treatment is usually to reduce the amount of blood and of neurokinin. However, many questions remain without answers and the problems of headaches remain as a challenge to medical science.

Choose the correct answer from a, b, c, or d.

29. What is the main idea of the passage?

- (a) Aspirin has harmful side effects. (b) Headaches are challenging to science.
(c) The treatments of headaches are unknown.
(d) Women are only vulnerable to headaches.

Read the following passage, then answer the questions

When I wake up each morning and read the newspaper, I ask myself, every day, the same question: "what is wrong with the world?" The world today is richer than it has ever been before. With the help of science, we are now able to use the wealth of our world to our maximum benefit. We are more educated than our ancestors ever dreamed of. We have access to more knowledge. I ask myself everyday what is wrong with our world? I can answer that question with three words: it is sick.

It is sick with fear, instability and insecurity, sick with tension and terrorism. Sick with power, greed and even with its own richness, and because there is so much sickness in the world today.

Just look at the contrast. In some developed countries, they burn crops to keep up their prices, whereas in poor countries thousands of children starve to death in the desert sun. In western countries, they have mountains of butter melting to waste while in poor countries, a peasant often has to pay half a day's wage for cooking oil. In the rich countries, people die not of hunger but of over eating.

But I am a dreamer. I hope that one day all the people of the world will work together rather than fight each other. They will establish a firm and lasting peace which promotes the unity and brotherhood, based on mutual respect, understanding, and acceptance of the other.

Read the following passage, then answer the questions

In English, the phrase 'black sheep of the family' is used to describe someone who doesn't live his or her life the way the rest of the family expects them to. People like this must be common, because many other languages, mostly European, have exactly the same idiom. Other languages, like Russian, talk about someone being a 'white crow' (crows being birds that are nearly always black). Real black sheep are rather rare. From a farmer's point of view, black wool couldn't be changed into different colours, so it was seen as worthless. As a result, farmers used to be disappointed when, by chance, their white sheep sometimes had a baby with black wool. So if a family had a black sheep, it was definitely thought to be something undesirable.

Nowadays, though, the phrase has lost some of its negative meaning. This is probably because people don't worry as much as they used to if someone is a bit different from normal. In fact, some people even think of it as an advantage: it means that the person has a more exciting life than most others, who just follow the rules and don't take risks.

Read the following passage, then answer the questions

Long ago, when early humans discovered how to make fire, they told their friends. Then those friends told others. Ideas spread from person to person, and in fact, they still do. However, mass media is different. It brings news and knowledge to many people very quickly.

Mass media began around 1440, when Johannes Gutenberg changed the way news traveled. He invented the printing press. Before the printing press, people had to make copies of books by hand. Suddenly, this invention could make copies of books much more easily. Then, about 150 years later, people printed the first newspapers in Europe. Today, people around the world read newspapers every day.

Television broadcasting started in the 1930s. Now, television is everywhere, bringing news and entertainment to people around the world. Some stations now offer 24-hour news. Events are broadcasted live, while they are happening.

Today, almost one third of the people in the world use the web and this number will continue to grow. The web, or Internet, lets us read news, watch videos, and share information through social networks and blogs. Many people think that the Web is now the most important form of mass media. Read the following passage, then answer the questions

The internet has become more interactive than it was in the past. Billions of people around the world are using social networking sites to connect with one another. Facebook is one of the most popular social networking sites in the world. A Harvard University student started Facebook in 2004, and it spread to more than 400 million users in just a few years.

Social networking sites allow users to communicate and socialize through voice and video chats, instant messaging, and e-mails. People can share photographs of themselves and of others. They can tell friends what they are doing at any moment and keep in touch. They can post a link to a site with their favourite songs or bands. They can join groups with others who share their interests.

Social networking sites are of great importance for both academics and businessmen. They allow academics to create networks to share their research and ideas. For many companies, social networking sites are considered an ideal marketing tool as they are free to use and can reach customers of all ages anywhere in the world.

However, social networks can contain inappropriate sites or videos that shouldn't be seen by teenagers. Whether you like it or not, the information you post on the Internet is available to almost anyone who is clever enough to access it. Read the following passage, then answer the questions

"I will think of it". It's easy to say this, but do you know what great things have come from thinking? We can't see our thoughts, or feel them and yet what might power they have! Newton was sitting in his garden on a summer's evening when he saw an apple falling from a tree. He began to think, and, in trying to find out why the apple fell, he discovered how the earth, sun, moon, and stars are kept in their places. A man named Galileo was once standing in the Cathedral of Pisa when he saw a chandelier swaying to and fro. This made him think, and it led to the invention of the pendulum. Read the following passage, then answer the questions

The food we eat seems to have profound effects on our health. Although science has made enormous steps in making food more fit to eat, it has, at the same time, made many foods unfit to eat. Some research has shown that perhaps eighty percent of all human illnesses are related to diet and forty percent of cancer is related to the diet as well, especially cancer of the colon. People of different cultures are more prone to contract certain illnesses because of the characteristic foods they consume.

That food is related to illness is not a new discovery. In 1945, government researchers realized that nitrates nitrites (commonly used to preserve color in meat) as well as other food additives caused cancer. Yet, these carcinogenic additives remain in our food, and it becomes more difficult all the time to know which ingredients on the packaging label of processed food are helpful or harmful.

The additives that we eat are not all so direct. Farmers often give penicillin to cattle and poultry, and because of this, penicillin has been found in the milk of treated cows.

Sometimes similar drugs are administered to animals not for medical purposes, but for financial reasons. The farmers are simply trying to fatten the animals in order to obtain a higher price on the market. Although the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has tried repeatedly to control these procedures, the practices continue.

A healthy diet is related to good health. Often we are unaware of detrimental substances we ingest. Sometimes well-meaning farmers or others who do not realize the consequences add these substances to food without our knowledge.

B- Reading Comprehension

MC

Read the following passage, then answer the questions

Many different factors affect how well we learn. About 20% of the calories we eat are used by our brain but not all calories help the brain. Research suggests that some foods, such as egg yolk, whole grains, nuts, fish, dark leafy green vegetables, beans, and strawberries might be especially good for concentration and memory.

Drinking enough water is important. The brain is more than 70% water. If we don't drink enough water, it affects our concentration. We need around six to eight glasses of non-sugary fluid each day. Moreover, studies suggest that the brain does not do well with sudden rushes of sugar, so sweet, fizzy drinks do not help the brain either.

Remember also the importance of oxygen, which is carried to the brain by your blood. When you move your body, your blood flow increases and your brain gets more oxygen. Going for a walk, running, or riding a bike really help get oxygen to the brain, as do stretching and breathing deeply.

Besides exercise, sleep is important. When we are asleep, the brain practices what we did during the day. We actually learn in our sleep. If you have a hard time falling asleep, try listening to gentle music, thinking positive thoughts, or reading something funny to relax. Avoid video games and exciting TV shows in the hour before bedtime.

Read the following passage, then answer the questions

It is bad to have food stuck between your teeth for long time as food attracts germs which produce acid, and acid hurts your teeth. Flossing helps to remove this food. This explains why flossing helps to keep your mouth healthy, but some doctors say that flossing can be also good for your heart.

It may seem strange that something you do for your teeth can have an effect on your heart. Doctors have some ideas about how flossing works to keep your heart healthy.

One idea is that the germs that hurt your teeth can travel into blood and attack your heart. Another idea is that when there are too many germs in your mouth, the body tries to fight them, and the way the body fights these germs may weaken the heart.

Not every doctor agrees about these ideas. Some doctors think that the link between good flossing habits and good heart health is only coincidence. A coincidence is the occurrence of two or more things at one time apparently by mere chance. For example, every time I wash my car, it rains. This doesn't mean that when I wash my car, it rains. Likewise, some doctors think that people who have bad flossing habits may have heart problems, and people who have good flossing habits may have healthy hearts.

The theory that flossing your teeth helps to keep your body healthy might not be true. But every doctor agrees that flossing is a great way to keep your teeth healthy. So even if flossing doesn't help your heart, it is sure to help your teeth.

B- Reading Comprehension

Read the following passage, then answer the questions

People like to be well - dressed, but rarely ask themselves what the clothes they are wearing are made from. In fact, thousands of animals are killed everyday so that rich people can enjoy wearing the most fashionable and trendiest clothes. Some animals, such as guinea pigs and rabbits, are used for scientific research. Mice and other animals are experimented upon by scientists working for companies involved in the manufacture of shampoos that we use, to keep our hair clean and to look good. We even kill whales, whose oil is used to make expensive soaps or make up. Other animals, the arctic fox, for example, are killed for their fur which is used in the manufacture of expensive coats. Elephants are killed for their ivory, which is made into jewellery. Crocodiles are killed for their skin, which is used to make shoes. Often these animals are treated with great cruelty. Some of them are in danger of becoming extinct. Increasingly, individual people and organizations are working to protect these animals. The first step in this direction was taken when the Royal Society for the prevention of Cruelty to Animals (RSPCA) was established all over world. The RSPCA calls on governments to set up nature reserves to protect such animals. It is illegal to kill any animal on these reserves. At the same time, strict action has been taken against illegal hunting ever it occurs in the world. The RSPCA also asks people to stop buying and wearing products from endangered animals. Read the following passage, then answer the questions

Feeling a bit stressed about something? Well, you're not alone. In the modern world, it's almost impossible to avoid stress. For adults, there are the pressures of work, while teenagers often suffer from exam stress. And now we know that stress can have terrible effects on our health. So, what can we do to reduce it? One of the best tools to reduce stress is music. Research has shown that listening to calm classical music reduces stress hormone levels in the blood, while a study from the Royal Northern College of Music found that singing can reduce stress- even if you have a terrible voice!

Generally, music produces positive brain neurotransmitters, which make you feel more relaxed. Another way to deal with stress is to take cold showers. According to the Dutch extreme athlete Wim Hof, who made the method popular, having a cold shower forces the body to feel extremely stressed, so any other stress that you feel later in the day doesn't feel as bad! Also, cold showers make your heart and lungs work, making you healthier. When we exercise, our bodies release hormones called endorphins, which make us feel happy. Doing exercise also makes us feel that we have achieved something, which psychologists say is very important for overall happiness. For best results, you should exercise for around 150 minutes a week- broken up in two or three separate sessions.

The story of tea began over 5000 years ago in ancient China. According to legend, an early emperor, Shen Nü, Required all drinking water to be boiled as a health precaution. One day, when he had stopped to rest during a long journey, his servants were boiling the water as usual when dried leaves from a nearby bush fell into and turned the water brown. Because the emperor was curious by nature, he drank some of this new liquid and found it very refreshing.

The drinking of tea soon spread throughout Chinese, and later Japanese, society. In Japan, it became a complicated art form called 'The Ceremony'. The most important aspect of this was that the tea should be served in the most polite, graceful and charming manner possible. This required years of training and practice.

Tea first arrived in Europe around the sixteenth century.
